- Bowyer at Las Vegas in February 2020: Bowyer started ninth and fell to 18th with a tight-handling car by the end of the first stage. The crew worked to correct the issues and he finished 16th in the second stage. His final green-flag pit stop came with 50 laps to go, but seconds later a caution dropped Bowyer and all except the top-five cars off the lead lap. Bowyer took the wave-around to return to the lead lap in 18th with 42 laps remaining. A shootout just before the white flag waved saw Bowyer jump from 18th to 12th
- Bowyer at Las Vegas in September 2019: Bowyer earned his third career pole when he led an SHR sweep of the top four qualifying positions. He struggled with handling during the race, falling down a lap to the leaders. He took the wave-around near the end of the race and returned to the lead lap in 16th with fresh tires. On a restart, Bowyer and Paul Menard made contact, forcing Bowyer to pit lane for new tires dropping him to 30th. Bowyer climbed to 25th by the end of the race.

Bowyer: “I thought we were going to capitalize, but there at the end it all went bad.”
